Your coronavirus (COVID-19) test result is positive. This means you probably have the virus.

If you are in England

You are no longer legally required to self-isolate. However, if you have a positive test result, public health advice is to stay at home and avoid contact with other people where possible.

If you are in Scotland, Wales or Northern Ireland

You must now self-isolate following the government rules for the region of the UK you are in (click on the relevant link below):-

Scotland Wales Northern Ireland
